

Lady Blomfield, Her Life and Times

The life of Sara Louisa, Lady Blomfield, spanned one of the most exciting periods in human history the last half of the 19th and first half of the 20th centuries and the social and political developments that defined the era: the suffragist movement, the rise of eastern religious thought, Theosophy and spiritualism in Europe, the First World War, modernization. She experienced the poverty of rural Ireland and the ceremony of the royal court in London. Beyond this, Lady Blomfield was one of the most socially distinguished adherents of the Bahai Faith, moving in social circles that included royalty, members of government and the celebrities of the day. She was the gracious and generous hostess to Abdul-Baha on His historic visits to London in 1911 and 1912-13 and was a chronicler of Bahai history in her book The Chosen Highway. Above all, she was a tireless advocate of the Bahai Faiths spiritual and social teachings; a defender of her persecuted co religionists in Iran; a champion of the rights of women, children, prisoners and animals; and an ardent promoter of peace and interreligious understanding. Robert Weinbergs detailed research has yielded a fascinating insight into the life of Lady Blomfield, her family and her circle, and into the life of Abdul-Baha as it touched the lives of the British Bahais. Punctuated by glimpses into London society and the rapidly developing Bahai community, Weinbergs book provides compelling grounds for Lady Blomfields inclusion in the galaxy of unforgettable women who became the principal exponents of the Bahai message on both sides of the Atlantic .
