

Maribel Gibson always wanted to be extraordinary. Having grown up in the Deep South, she not only dealt with racism, she triumphed over it. No matter what came her way, she turned the situation around to her benefit. So when she moves to New York in pursuit of a journalism career, she thought her life could only get better. But as her main job opportunity slips through her fingers, she suddenly finds herself all alone and jobless in a big city, panicking. Then chance presents her with an unexpected boon: the scoop of a lifetime in the form of an unhappy billionaire. Regardless of how she feels about the man spilling his story, she knows it's her shot to get in the big leagues, and she's about to take it. Jim Craig only wants normalcy. The son of a billionaire and forced into the family business, Jim longs to be just a regular guy. His whole life, his dad pressured him into more and more, and now, facing one of his worst fears—an arranged marriage of all things—he takes off before he can go through with it. He seeks refuge in a bar and runs into a beautiful woman who tempts him to take a load off and spill everything. Little does he know, the beautiful stranger is a reporter, and they both might get more than they bargained for once their secrets come to light! The Billionaire Scoop is a standalone BWWM interracial romance on the sweet side. No cliffhangers!
